

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Optical Short Course International Inc.

Web Site Launched

12 September 2003 -- Today Optical Short Course International Inc. (OSCI Inc.) of Tucson, AZ officially launched their NEW! website. The company creates and develops technical short courses in the area of optical science and engineering. The firm is located in Tucson, AZ which is know as the "Optics Valley" because of the high concentration of companies involved in optical science and optical engineering as well as the Optical Science Center at the University of Arizona which specializes in education and research in the optical sciences.

Technical short courses are training classes that typically last from four hours to three days in length and cover technical topics of interest to companies world wide. OSCI Inc. will create and develop short courses on DVD's, and courses to be delivered at scheduled times and locations, as well as courses for companies who want in-house training of their people together in a confidential setting. Many companies who are developing new products and processes that involve optical science and engineering require training of their people and development teams.

Our customers often are involved in a new product or process development effort and are adding new people to the projects and need to get them all trained to a common level of knowledge. This is where they turn to us for their training needs in optical science and engineering. Sure, there are area experts on the team but in today's fast paced development cycles don't allow these experts to spend half their day training every new person who comes on the team. This is where the value of our courses is really evident, we can help train all team members to the same level of required knowledge in a very short period of time. The area experts at the company can add the finishing touches to the training of the team by teaching members the very specialized or company proprietary information.

The company plans to develop about eight new course DVD's and to give about twelve scheduled courses world wide in the first year as well as some in-house training courses to larger companies world wide.

#

For More Information Contact:

Inc.
1128 NE 2nd Street, Ste 104
Corvallis, OR 97330 USA
Tel: 541-255-2165
Internet: